SUMMARY

The poem 'Problem Solving' written by 'George Ansell' is a poem full of fun.

This poem describes how a child is forcing his teacher with his cleverness to tell him how to solve the problem. Here Jack, the child in the poem who doesn't want to solve the problem by his own because he was probably too lazy to work on the abacus.

In the poem, it is also told that Jack was confident and clever as according to him, he was solving the problem in his mind. Though every time he was answering wrong but finally he was able to get the right answer from his teacher.

Finally, we get a lesson from this poem that to get rid of any trouble or any problem well, we must have confidence, cleverness and problem solving abilities so that small or even big troubles can be handled in life.
